Summary: With the delayed arrival of high pressure (now expected to build in on Saturday), Friday's forecast now includes a chance for rain showers, particularly during the morning and early afternoon hours, along with windy conditions due to the passage of a cold front. While Saturday is looking nearly dry, high temperatures are now expected to hold into the 60's.

Forecast Confidence: Some uncertainty regarding peak heating (high temperatures) as weather models tend to overdo the cold air in the long-range forecast, so I've aired on the warmer side of guidance... There is now above average confidence for dry conditions on Saturday.
